THE CHOICE OF GETTYSBURG

By Lieutenant A. H. B. JEFFORDS, I. R. P., National Guard of Pennsylvania

THE Division Encampment at Gettysburg during the week of July 12th-19th, will be the greatest in the history of the Guard. As this will be the last encampment of the Stone administration, not only the Governor will be present with his staff, but special efforts will be made to secure the attendance of President Roosevelt, Secretary of War Root and Major General Miles.

The selection of Gettysburg for the encampment has a deep significance in addition to the physical advantages it offers for accommodating a division; this site has the attraction of being the scene where the most decisive event of the Civil War occurred, at which time the valor and courage of the Pennsylvania volunteer soldiers achieved a place in history equalled by few and surpassed by none.

I.

It is both pertinent and timely to review briefly here the main events of those three thrilling days that marked the turning point of the Civil War.

At the time that Grant conquered at Vicksburg and Meade won at Gettysburg, the Federal Government was attacked in front by a victorious army under a very able general, and harrassed in the rear by a political party which, if not disloyal, was certainly not zealous in support of the Union cause. If Lee had beaten Meade the North would have been in a panic of fear and the Union disrupted; but, as Lee was beaten, the Confederates were thereafter on the defensive. The Confederate hope was not utterly destroyed at Gettysburg; however, had the issue been different, Union hope would have been destroyed. The victory gained by Meade, though not a decisive victory in a purely strategic sense, had the moral effect of convincing thousands of doubters that there was still hope for the preservation of the Union; while, politically, it stopped Lee in a movement that might very well have ended in his dictating the terms of peace to Linciln's Cabinet at Washington.

On June 28, 1863, Hooker resigned the command of the Union Army on the Potomac, and was succeeded by Meade, who recognized the fact that Lee was gradually separating himself perilously from his base and jeopardizing his communications; it, therefore, became the Union general's immediate object to place his army in Lee's rear and so cut him off. Lee was fully alive to his danger and saw that he could push on no farther until Meade"s army, which hung on his rear and flank, should at least be crippled.

On the morning of July 1st, A. P. Hill's corps had approached the town of Gettysburg on the north, and was scattered along the Chambersburg turnpike. Opposite to Hill's position and about a mile and a half outside the town was Buford, with the vanguard of the Union army, a force of some 6,000 cavalry. It was here the first day's battle began. Large bodies of infantry soon began arriving to support Buford, and so began the struggle for Seminary Ridge. Roy Stone's "Buck-tail" brigade of Pennsylvanians—the 143d, 149th and 150th Regiments—held the key to the fight, and were placed on the left of the Chambersburg pike, forming the famous "one thin line" which withstood the tremendous onslaught of overwhelming numbers. Stripping for the fray and unslinging knapsacks, the men called out "We have come to stay!" and 50 per cent. did stay. Every field officer in the brigade save one, was shot, and many of them several times. The 151st Pennsylvania, a regiment formed of school teachers and their pupils, was the last to leave the line when retreat was ordered. The Confederate General, Heth, said that "the dead of the 151st marked the line of battle with the accuracy of a 'dress parade' "—out of 800 the regiment lost 588 men and officers. The first advantage was with the Union troops, but in a few hours Hill's and Ewell's corps arrived, forming an aggregate force of 50,000 men, and drove the Union troops towards Seminary Ridge, then pell-mell through the town itself.

On the morning of the second day the whole line of Cemetery Ridge was occupied by the Union forces under Hancock, while two of Lee's three corps—Hill's and Longstreet's—occupied Seminary Ridge, and the third, Ewell's, lay at the foot of Culp's Hill. Lee ordered Longstreet, on the extreme south of Seminary Ridge, to attack the enemy's strong position directly opposite him, on Round Top, the southern point of Cemetery Ridge. A mere accident, General Sickels having disobeyed or mistaken the orders of Meade, resulted in Longstreet's corps being allowed to break in on the Union's left. It was discovered in time that Little Round Top, a position of the greatest importance, had been left unoccupied. By the prompt action of Hancock, however, the hill was secured, but Longstreet's men at the close of the day still held the gap in Cemetery Ridge. On Meade's right, Ewell's attack on Culp's Hill was delayed until late in the day, but was eventually successful.

Early in the morning of July 3d, Meade assaulted and captured the positions on Culp's Hill which Ewell had gained, and of this fact Lee remained ignorant. The famous artillery duel of Gettysburg began about 1 o'clock; the Confederates opened fire from Seminary Ridge with 120 guns; the Federals replied with only 80. At about 3 o'clock the Union artillery ceased firing in order to allow the smoke to blow away. Lee interpreted the cessation in the firing to mean that the Union guns had been placed hors de combat, and argued that it was time to develop his grand attack.

He then directed through Longstreet the "Pickett's" charge, fully as wonderful as and more disastrous than the charge at Balaklava.

Pickett's and Pettigrew's divisions charged the Union lines at the angle of the stone wall which surrounded the cemetery on Cemetery Hill, opposite Longstreet's left. From end to end of the Cemetery Ridge the guns opened fire on Pickett's men. The Confederate artillery ammunition ran short and the charge went unsupported. The charge was directed at first for Doubleday's division, but soon changed its course and inclining to the Federal right, the column made for Hancock's corps. Hancock waited until Pettigrew's brigade had got to within 300 yards, then he gave volley after volley, sending it to atoms. The rest of Pickett's men charged over the stone wall of the cemetery, where they were overpowered. About twenty per cent. of Pickett's men came out of the charge alive.

Then Meade thought it time to deliver his final blow. Hood, on Lee's right, was driven back, and the Confederate hopes of crushing the army that threatened their communications were at an end.

II.

The grounds selected for the disposition of the three brigades, the troops and batteries, cover the most historic and important portions of the battlefield.

Among other advantages there will be an abundant supply of pure mountain water for the division. It is tapped separately from the main before it enters the city, a three-inch pipe to each brigade. The troops and batteries will have a pipe connection at the Seminary on the hill, which will run down through the center of their camp. The railroads have made special provisions for transportation; the unloading will be a quarter of a mile from the camp ground. The Gettysburg Electric Railway passes along the sites of the three brigades, offering the best of facilities to visitors for reaching the camps. All three brigades will adjoin the parade ground, an immense field, part of which the First Brigade occupied in 1894.

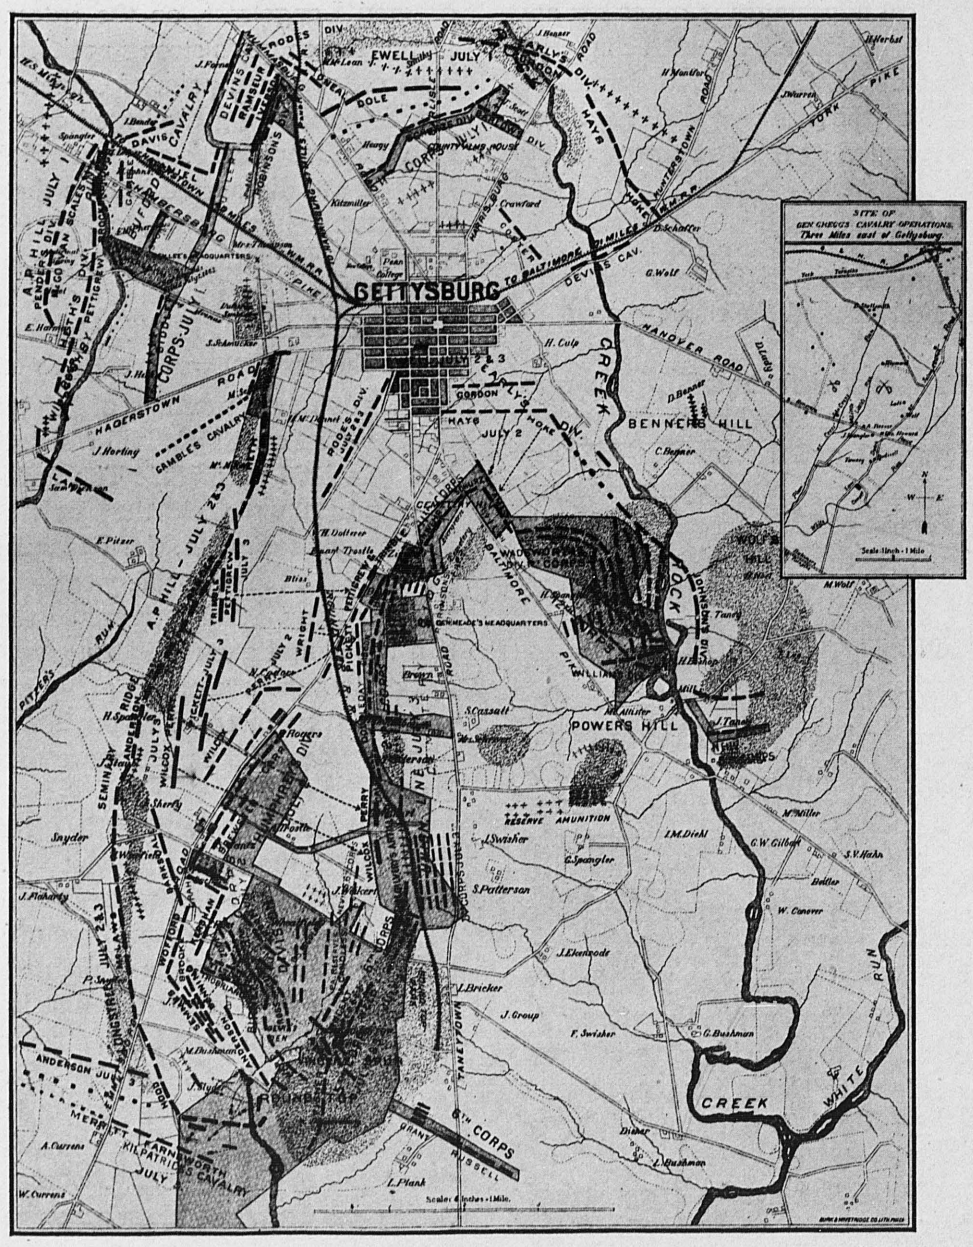
The troops and batteries, including Foote's Battery of the Regular Army, will be located in the territory occupied by the first day's fight, between the Hagerstown and the Springs road, facing on Reynolds avenue, and close to where General Reynolds was killed. Their drill gound adjoins their camp, and the beauty of its natural surroundings, with the ample space it affords—750 feet wide by 2500 feet long, with a little slope along Reynolds avenue—makes it an ideal place for manoeuvres.

The General and Division Headquarters will face the Emmitsburg road at the Bloody Angle, known as the High Water Mark of the Rebellion. From this point the whole encampment will be in full view.

The Second Brigade will also be placed along the Emmitsburg road at the commencement of Sickles avenue, opposite the Roger House on the Codori and Trostle farms. This is where General Barr with his brigade of the famous old Third Corps changed front three times while under fire. Also, here Perry's and Wilcox's Rebel brigades charged down over this piece of ground on the evening of the second day, when they killed and wounded all of the First Minnesota Regiment except forty-two. Over this spot General Sickles fought his fight, and here Bigelow lost his men and the horses of his battery and was compelled to abandon his guns.

The Third Brigade will be located on the outskirts of the city along Washington street, near the old fair grounds. This is the ground where General Rhodes, of Ewell's corps, formed his division



GETTYSBURG AND VICINITY

The First Brigade will be located along the Emmitsburg road, on the Spangler farm. The land rises slightly, affording a space of one hundred acres to drill on. This brigade will occupy the ground on which General Pickett formed his division for the charge. And it was over this ground, too, along the Emmitsburg road, that Kemper, Garnet and Armistead led their veteran Virginians opposite the Codori house, and, turning to their right, crossed the road and rushed for the stone wall in their front. While Kemper, Garnet and Armistead were moving to the point of attack, the artillery along the entire Union front (all in plain view from this brigade's tents) from Cemetery Hill to Round Top, poured shot and shell into the advancing line. Along this stone wall were captured twenty-seven Rebel battle flags.

on the evening of July 2d, which resulted in the assault and capture of a footing on Culp's Hill.

The battle-field of Gettysburg is not only the scene of one of the greatest battles of the world, but it is sacred ground, the dedication of which called forth Abraham Lincoln's most eloquent utterances; indeed, nothing more eloquent is known to have been spoken in the same compass by any man. In camping, therefore, on this historic ground, those words of Lincoln's will come home to Pennsylvania's Guardsmen with especial force.

"In a larger sense we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here."

COLONEL DANIEL B. SHEPP

Colonel Daniel B. Shepp, one of the junior members of the Governor's Staff, made his initial bow as an aide-de-camp on the occasion of the Pennsylvania Commission's visiting the Charleston Exposition in April last. The military bearing of Governor Stone's new appointee deeply impressed Colonel Ezra H. Ripple, Assistant Adjutant General, who had official charge of the party, as well as the other veteran members of the Staff. The Colonel bids fair to become a military enthusiast and is paying particular attention to rifle and pistol practice.

He is a native of Berks County, having been born on a farm near Reading. He received a liberal education and at the age of sixteen taught school; subsequently, he completed a course at a commercial college, and after his graduation became financier for a large Philadelphia wholesale woolen house. In 1883, he started in the publication business in Philadelphia with a very small capital, but succeeded from the first. He is to-day, with his brother, joint proprietor of one of the largest publication firms in the world. Colonel Shepp is an author as well as a publisher, and some of his works have found enormous sales. He is also largely interested in street passenger railways throughout the State. He is one of the principal stockholders in the Reading and Southwestern Street Railway Co., and is a director in the Schuylkill Valley Traction Co., and other allied corporations. He is a lover of art and frequently goes abroad in search of novelties in the line of art and literature.

The Colonel is a popular member of many clubs, among them being the Manufacturers' Club, the Art Club, the Merion and Philadelphia Cricket Clubs, the Fellowship Club, the Pen and Pencil Club, the Fortnightly Club and the Penrose Club.

At a recent supper of the Fellowship Club, his many friends and admirers presented him with a magnificent regulation sword, appropriately inscribed, as a mark of the esteem in which they held him.

NAVAL NOTES

The U. S. S. Shearwater, which was sent to the Navy Yard last month to be put into dry-dock to have her hull scraped and painted, has been returned to her berth at Bainbridge street, and is now having the finishing touches put upon her preparatory to the regular summer work.

The form that the Battalion's annual tour of duty will take this year is as yet undecided, which makes it awkward for the men who have to make early arrangements with their employers as to summer holidays. Commander Ruschenberger sent a request to the Navy Department through the Governor that the Battalion be given an eight days' cruise on one of the vessels of the Navy regularly in commission as used to be done. Some of the other Naval Militias have sent in similar requests, but the Department has not yet signified its intentions in the matter. In case the Department decides not to take any of the Battalions away, it is probable that the Pennsylvania Militia will either go off on the Shearwater in detachments for eight day cruises, as was done last year, or else use the Shearwater in connection with some other vessel, which together would be large enough to hold the whole Battalion.

Surgeon Sailer, who has been connected with the Battalion since before the war, has asked to resign as soon as a successor is ready to take his place, and it is likely that Dr. Henry E. Wetherill will soon be appointed. Dr. Wetherill has just returned from the Philippines, where he was a surgeon in the Medical Corps, having entered the service at the outbreak of the Spanish War, at which time he held the rate of Apothecary in the Battalion, so that he will now be returning to his old organization.

The first court martial held in the Naval Militia in a long time was that of Chief Pay Yeoman Edward S. Townshend,, who was tried on charges and specifications involving absence from duty and neglect of duty. He was found guilty and has been ordered to be discharged for the good of the service.

COLONEL WILLIAM J. HARVEY, Pennsylvania Commandery, Loyal Legion, a prominent and representative citizen of Wilkes-Barre, who is greatly interested in the work of the National Guard of Pennsylvania

CAPTAIN JOHN W. DORAN

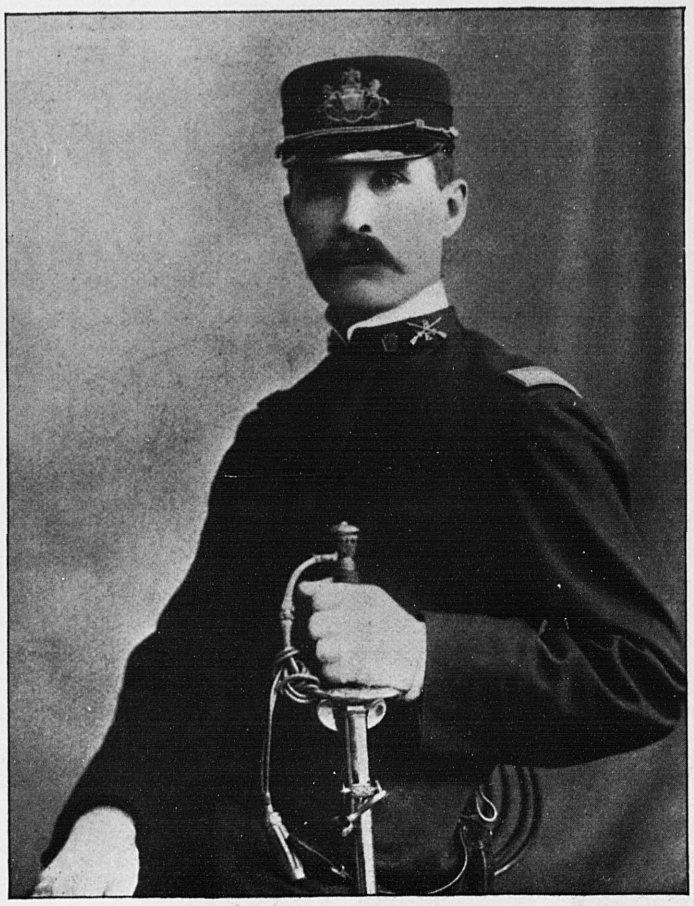
One of the popular and best known officers in the Wyoming Valley is Captain John W. Doran, commanding Company "E," Ninth Infantry, located at Parsons. He was born and educated in Canada and served in the 54th and 79th Battalions, Canadian Volunteer Militia. He went to Massachusetts in 1871, where he became very much interested in the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia and served three years in Company "D" of the Second Regiment, a portion of which time was devoted to the regimental band, he being a musician of no mean ability. In 1890, he came to Pennsylvania as general manager of the Wilkes-Barre Lace Manufacturing Co., and while his business affairs made it almost impossible for him to take an active part, his love for music drew him to Alexander's Ninth Regiment Band. He was finally prevailed upon by the Professor to become one of its members. His sterling worth was soon recognized in the command, and when Company "E" was left without a Captain, he was unanimously chosen to fill that place. This was in November, 1901. Captain Doran is connected with a number of prominent clubs and societies, and is an active spirit in everything connected with National Guard work.

EDITOR'S NOTE

We regret exceedingly the jumbled up condition of the last paragraph of General Paul A. Oliver's address to the marksmen of the Ninth Infantry, which appeared in the April issue of the "Journal." In order that our many readers may intelligently understand what was meant, we feel that a corrected reprint is in order:

"And now let me turn to the marksmen of the Regiment, who are to receive their badges to-night. The importance of training the soldier in marksmanship can hardly be overestimated. The rapid fire of the present arm makes the expenditure of ammunition so easy that unless men are trained in the proper use of their weapon it will be impossible to supply them with ammunition. Unless a soldier can hit something, he is only in the way and is a burden and expense to the army. It is with signal pleasure, therefore, that I see the record of your marksmanship to-night."



CAPTAIN JOHN W. DORAN,
Company "E." Ninth Infantry.

ORDERS

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL GUARD OF PENNA.,
ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE.

HARRISBURG, May 22, 1902.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 17.

I. The following appointment on the Staff of the Commander-in-Chief is hereby announced:

William T. Lindsey, of Allegheny County, Pa., to be Aide-de-Camp with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel.

He will be obeyed and respected accordingly.

II. In accordance with the provisions of the Act of Assembly approved April 28, 1899 (Section 44), the following named officer being entitled thereto, is upon his own application, placed upon the Retired List, to date from March 20, 1902:

Captain Millard Scheide, late Adjutant, Sixteenth Regiment Infantry.

By order of WILLIAM A. STONE,
Governor and Commander-in-Chief.

THOMAS J. STEWART,
Adjutant General.

OFFICIAL:

TWELFTH REGIMENT NOTES

Colonel Charles M. Clement, of the Twelfth Regiment, is being urged for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant Governor.

Second Lieutenant Ralph S. Koser, Company "G," Twelfth Regiment, has resigned because of change of residence.

Sergeant Major George E. Deppen, Twelfth Regiment, has re-enlisted and has been re-appointed.

Company "D," Twelfth Regiment, will go to camp ith a full platoon of men whose height is five feet ten inches or taller.

The four Williamsport companies of the Twelfth Regiment began a series of battalion drills May 22.

On May 3, Company "C," Twelfth Regiment, elected Second Lieutenant Joseph D. Nicholas to First Lieutenant, and Sergeant Alfred Hester to Second Lieutenant.

Companies "D" and "G," Twelfth Regiment, are endeavoring to go to camp with every man a qualified marksman. During the first fifteen days of the season Company "D" qualified 28 men, and Company "G" 29.

The Twelfth Regiment Band will furnish the music for the Fifty-second Commencement of Bucknell University, to be held at Lewisburg, June 16, 17 and 18, 1902.

The Twilight Concerts will be given on the College Campus on the first two days mentioned. Special music is being prepared for these concerts.

Lieut. Fred. A. Godcharles, I. R. P., Twelfth Regiment, is a candidate for the Republican nomination for member of Congress in the Northumberland district.

Company "A," Twelfth Regiment, was the only company in the Third Brigade which actually paraded its full strength for inspection during the recent spring inspections. Many other companies had 100 per cent. present, but secured it by means of the furlough provision of the orders governing the inspections.

FIFTH REGIMENT NOTES

The Companies of the Fifth have been directed to take up the rifle practice and get the members qualified as quickly as possible.

First Lieutenant Palmer, of "H" Company, has resigned because of leaving the State. His successor has not been chosen.

C. I. H. may be back in the Guard again ere long, and in a position to be of some use to you. Please don't print it, but I rather expect to go back as a Lieutenant of "C" Company. ROOP.

The main topic of conversation just now among both officers and men is the question of reorganization, and whether the regimental organization is to be broken up and the companies distributed to other regiments or whether it will be retained and get another battalion.

The statement sent out from Pittsburg that the State property of two companies of the Fifth was found to be in an unserviceable condition is absolutely false, and was gotten out by some one whose "wish was father to the thought." Major Jefferies, the brigade inspector, plainly stated at the inspection of the last company that the State property was in good condition. The statement that at least two companies had fallen down on the inspection is another canard, for the inspecting officer said that improvement to some extent was shown in all the companies and to a marked extent in several of them.

During the absence of Major Chas. F. Lumb, Capt. Levi E. Dagit has been placed in command of the Philadelphia Battalion, Sixth Infantry.

The importance of having on hand supplies to enlarge the capacity of a field hospital, cannot be overestimated. Smart says: "The experience of the past shows that if the division hospital is thoroughly prepared to give the needful primary attention to twelve hundred wounded, the history of its service will not fail to give satisfaction. All ordinary and probable occasions will be provided for, and if the extraordinary or unlikely should occur, the circumstances which attend them may be susceptible of being turned to account in the interest of the wounded."

SATURDAY, May 24th, was a gala day for Major Thurber T. Brazer and the State Fencibles Battalion. They paraded in all their old time glory with their huge bear skin shakos, brilliant scarlet coats and white trousers. This was in honor of their eighty-ninth anniversary. The Battalion was preceded by their Old Guard, wearing a very neat uniform similar to that of the First Regiment Veteran Corps, except that the trimmings are of gold and the cap design is more in keeping with the present State regulation. They were accompanied by a finely equipped band of fifty pieces. The colors on this occasion were carried by Sergeant Stephen Barbier, who has served as color sergeant for nearly thirty years. The stand was received from the late Adjutant General Greenland. The Fencibles were greatly admired along the route of parade and hope was freely expressed that the Battalion would again become a portion of the National Guard.

THE proper placing of recruits at the several inspections is causing considerable discussion throughout the Division, especially in the Second Brigade. While no particular position has been laid down for the infantry arm, the custom in the First Brigade, which originated with Colonel Frank G. Sweeney, of Chester, when he was Brigade Inspector, is to have the recruits placed on the left flank of the company, as is the rule in the U. S. Cavalry service.

THE "Pittsburg Dispatch" of April 20th, reports that the National Guard authorities contemplate the disbandment of the Fourteenth Regiment Infantry. We would say in this connection that there has been no official action taken in the matter and it is not likely that there will be any steps toward the reorganization until after the encampment.

MANY officers in the Second and Third Brigades suggest that a State National Guard Association be formed at the coming encampment. It is more than likely that the Philadelphia Association will call for a convention of this kind.

Personal Mention

Several weeks ago while Captain Calvin Pardee, Ninth Infantry, was taking a spin in his auto, he met with a disaster near Chelten avenue, Germantown. Although his personal injuries were very slight, the machine was considerably damaged.

Major General Charles Miller, A. M., one of the trustees of Bucknell College, is expected to make the principal address at the corporation dinner to be given to the trustees, faculty and alumni of that institution on Wednesday, June 18th.

Major William P. Clarke, Inspector of the Third Brigade, suggests that a uniform schedule for the several Brigade Inspectors be adopted next year. This opinion is shared by a great many officers, who feel that in this manner a more satisfactory system of rating can be secured throughout the State.

NOTES

Adjutant General Stewart says he will have the results of the spring inspection published before camp.

The proposed march and bivouac of the Ninth Regiment has been postponed. The officers deemed it injudicious to make the demonstration under the present situation in the coal regions.

The Wilkes-Barre companies of the Ninth Regiment gave a battalion drill May 24, at the Catholic fair which was being held in their armory.

The companies of the Ninth worked hard to secure the prizes offered by Colonel Dougherty, and all did well. There will necessarily be lots of disappointments when the result is announced. All cannot win.

If the regimental rifle teams are to be provided with Krags it is time they were being issued to them.

Companies "A" and "I," Fourth Regiment, will occupy one floor of the new Masonic Temple, at Reading, when it is completed.

Company "G," Fourth Regiment, Pine Grove, is contemplating building a new armory.

The Thirteenth Regiment will not participate in the Memorial Day exercises at Scranton this year. The G. A. R. fixed the hour for the parade at a time which did not suit the regiment, and the companies preferred not to turn out rather than make a small showing.

The reception of Company "E" of the Thirteenth Infantry, at Honesdale, on May 2d, was a unique and interesting affair. Captain Bigelow and his Executive Committee, composed of Sergeants Swift and Blandin, Corporals Frailey and Reury, and Private Brown, deserve a great deal of credit for bringing about such a successful entertainment. An address by Colonel Louis A. Watres followed the preliminary musical program, which comprised vocal and instrumental selections, and was quite a feature of the evening.

POINTS TO REMEMBER.

Keep the score and notes of every practice.

Always aim just under the bull's eye at 6 o'clock.

Note in your book the cause of all poor shots, and be careful to avoid their repetition.

After the first shot from a cold gun, at long range, a higher elevation will be necessary to ove come the drop of the ball.

Find the zero of your rifle,..... for without it you can never tell how much windage you are really using.

Fire slowly, and hold the rifle perfectly steady every time, and if you find your aim becoming shaky, rest for a moment, then try again. Make every shot count.

Bright day and clean gun—lower elevation
Moist day, ... " "

Cloudy and dark, but dry day—higher elevation.

Bright, dry hot day—higher elevation.

Learn to shoot with both eyes open, and call your shots.

A gold medal for the tenth year of consecutive yearly qualification. This medal to be enameled in white, if the score on which it was won is a sharpshooter's score; in red, if a first-class marksman's score; in blue, if a second class marksman's score.

A pendant for the silver keystone containing the number of the year of qualification issued for each year of qualification subsequent to the fourth; of gold for a sharpshooter's score and of silver enameled in red for a first-class marksman's score, and of silver enameled in blue for a second-class marksman's score.

Requisition for gold medals will therefore only be made where the ten yearly qualifications were made in ten consecutive years.

Pendants will be also issued for the tenth and succeeding years of qualification.

No decorations are issued to third-class marksmen.

A decoration will be issued for qualifying with the revolver.

ANNUAL TEAM MATCHES.

The team competitions for the brigade and regimental trophies presented by the State, and for the McClellan skirmish trophy, will be arranged for and announced in future orders.

A team to represent the State at the Annual Inter-State and other competitions at Sea Girt, N. J., during the week beginning September 1, 1902, will be selected by the General Inspector of Rifle Practice.

AMMUNITION.

For the season of 1902, the maximum of fixed ammunition for target practice to be issued without charge will be five thousand rounds, and of blank cartridges five hundred rounds. Two thousand rounds of fixed ammunition will be forwarded for each company at the opening of the season without requisition.

Requisition will be made direct for the additional three thousand rounds of fixed ammunition when the two thousand furnished at opening of season is used, and when requisition is made it must be accompanied by the following certificate:

For season of 1902 the maximum of fixed ammunition for target practice to be issued without charge to batteries of artillery and troops of cavalry will be 8,000 rounds No. .38 calibre to each battery and 6,000 rounds to each troop of cavalry; 2,000 rounds will be forwarded to each battery and troop at the opening of the season without requisition.

Armory Co....., ...Regiment, N. G. of Pa.

I certify upon honor, that the above requisition is necessary, that the ammunition heretofore issued has been judiciously used, and that to this date this company has practiced....men upon the range, of whom....have this year qualified, and of which number....are sharpshooters.
